CREW WAS ASLEEP ON EXTRA FREIGHT

Official Investigation of Smashup At Crystal, Ida., Is Held.

CARS FOULED MAIN TRACK

Caboose and One Car Were Off Switch When the Crash Came-Official Report Shows Cause

Official investigation into the recent freight train sideswiping at Crystal, Ida., siding on the Oregon Short Line develops that the engineer and fireman of extra 1,039, were asleep, although they had been on duty only eight hours, half the time limit set by statute for continuous service.

The official report says: "At 5:38 a.m., Nov. 16, at the west end of Crystal siding, extra 1,032 east-bound, in charge of Conductor S. P. Miller and Engineer Mann, was pulling onto the siding to dear extra 1,030 westbound, in charge of Conductor Clark and Engineer Selsted. Extra 1,032 had 39 cars in the train, 37 of which were into the clear on the siding, while the caboose and one car fouled on the main track at the west switch. Extra 1,039, running on a schedule due at Crystal at 5:35, sideswiped the rear of extra 1032, striking swiped the rear of extra 1032, striking the second car from the caboose. The following casualties occurred: Charles Pfersick, stockman in charge of a car of emigrants, moveables and stock for Buhl, Ida., was slightly injured. Head Brakeman William Synhors, was gilled while riding on engine of 1039. Fireman W. L. Kelly, firing engine of 1033, working under the assumed name of D. P. Free was also killed Engineer. D. P. Frye, was also killed, Engineer Selsted escaping with only slight in-juries. The fireman and brakeman were buried under the cab of the engine.

"On the damaged cars of 1,032 were six horses, one of which was injured, the body of the car being demolished. A body of the car being demolished. A car of apples was damaged, so that the fruit will have to be transferred. The estimated total damage to rolling stock and contents is $1,500, damage to track $300. A shoofly track was built around the wreck, so trains could pass early in the afternoon. Extra 1,032 was three minutes on the time of extra 1,039 with proper protection, and the brakeman was on the pilot of engine the brakeman was on the pilot of engine of 1,032 with lighted fusec in his hand. Fireman Kelly's body has been shipped to Stirling, Colo, where his mother, Mrs. W. R. Gibson lives. Brakeman Snyhorst's family at La Grande has been notified. The testimony of the eastbound train hapids showed that ample precautions had been taken to Mag the west-bound freight, when it was discovered that the rear cars of 1,032 had broken air brake connections, in making the siding, and being dein making the siding, and being delayed in consequence, precautions were taken to flag the westbound 1,039. The testimony showed that, engine of 1,033 was not shut off, nor air applied. The entire crew on head end of extra 1,039 were asleep. Foreman Frye and Brakeman Synhorst were both on engine of 1,039, while the entire crew of extra 1,032 were flagging and trying to stops 1,039. Engineer Selsted claims he was trying to work the injector on left side of the engine. This statement is not true, as owing to the siding at Crystal being on a curve, all signals would be being on a curve, all signals would be more plainly in view from the left side of engine. Extra 1,032 was on the time of extra 1,039 about three minutes, at time of accident."
